

Internal Audit Co-Sourcing

Two lead magnets. Six emails each, over thirty days. This is everything a downloader receives, in the order it arrives.

FOR REVIEW

The Future Internal Audit Leader

Starts when someone downloads The Future Internal Audit Leader.

Six emails go out over the following month. The first hands over the download, the middle four send something worth reading, and the last one explains where Cherry Hill comes in and asks for a conversation. Every email is signed by the firm and asks for a reply rather than a click.

Day 0 Your download is ready	Day 3 A read on where internal audit is heading	Day 8 A podcast worth the commute	Day 15 A team-favourite read on IT procurement	Day 22 How one CAE extended coverage without hiring	Day 30 Where we usually come in on internal audit coverage
--	---	---	--	---	--

Your download is ready

Preview text: Plus a few words on how Cherry Hill works

YOUR DOWNLOAD

The Future Internal Audit Leader

Open your download

PDF, opens in your browser

Hi Sarah,

Here is your download. The button above will open it.

A quick note since we are new to your inbox. Cherry Hill is an internal audit and risk firm. Mostly former Chief Audit Executives with the standard credentialing stack (CIA, CRMA, CISA, CISSP, CDPSE). IIA Authorized Licensee. A member of our senior team played a role in shaping the 2024 Global Internal Audit Standards.

The thing we lead with: the senior practitioner who shows up to your kickoff is the same one who runs the engagement, scope through report.

We will send a handful of pieces over the next month that pair with what you grabbed. Mostly broader reads on where internal audit is heading and what senior practitioners are reading right now.

If a 30-minute conversation with a senior practitioner would help in the meantime, reply to this email.

The Cherry Hill team

A read on where internal audit is heading

Preview text: The 2024 Standards in practice, not theory

FROM THE RISK REGISTER

How the Role of Internal Audit Is Evolving Under the Global Standards

Hi Sarah,

A piece our team wrote that pairs with the guide.

How the Role of Internal Audit Is Evolving Under the Global Standards →

A practitioner read on what the 2024 Standards actually change in fieldwork, not just on the org chart. Most coverage of the new Standards stayed at the framework level. The day-to-day shift for internal audit teams is the part worth understanding.

GOES WITH IT

If you have not pulled it, The 2026 Pulse of Internal Audit is the annual benchmarking read on budget, scope and staffing across internal audit functions. Useful for sense-checking where your function sits.

The Cherry Hill team

A podcast worth the commute

Preview text: What separates senior internal audit leaders from the rest

PODCAST

All Things IA: Beyond Business Cards

Podcast artwork to be sourced

Hi Sarah,

If you have a commute this week, here is the episode our team has been passing around.

The angle that hit for us: what separates senior internal audit leaders from everyone else is not the credentialing stack. It is the judgment about which audits to push back on, which findings to soften, and when to walk into the CFO's office without an appointment.

Listen here

The Cherry Hill team

A team-favourite read on IT procurement

Preview text: Not as heavy as it sounds

FROM THE RISK REGISTER

Hi Sarah,

A team-favourite read for when the formal internal audit content gets heavy.

The RAM-pocalypse: Why 2026 Procurement Is a Nightmare →

It covers IT procurement risk in a register that does not take itself too seriously. The angle is what shadow IT actually looks like when developers stop waiting for procurement, and what internal audit functions might do about it.

If you want something heavier, The Internal Auditor's Playbook for 2026 is the annual look at what should be on a competent internal audit plan.

The Cherry Hill team

How one CAE extended coverage without hiring

Preview text: Anonymized, but the structure is real

This one is waiting on the engagement details. Everything around it is finished.

FROM AN ENGAGEMENT

How one CAE extended coverage without hiring

Hi Sarah,

TO COME FROM MIKE: the client detail, the specific question, and the outcome. See his 15 June comment offering a call to build these.

The CAE inherited an internal audit function that was sized for the company three years ago. The board's expectations had grown, covering AI governance, third-party risk, the Topical Requirements rollout and increased fraud scrutiny, and the team had not.

We came in co-source. A senior practitioner from our team ran the two specialty audits across the next eight months, alongside the CAE's existing team. The audit committee got the coverage they were asking for, the team built the muscle, and the CAE did not have to defend a hiring case at year-end.

If you are sitting with a similar gap, reply to this email and a senior practitioner can walk you through how it would scope.

The Cherry Hill team

Where we usually come in on internal audit coverage

Preview text: Co-source, not outsource

WHERE WE COME IN

Where we usually come in on internal audit coverage

Hi Sarah,

Last one from us in this series. If you have made it through all six, thanks for reading.

Here is where we usually come in on internal audit work, in case any of it lines up with what you are thinking about.

01

Co-sourced internal audit

Our most common engagement. A senior practitioner from our team runs specific audits alongside your internal audit team. Common areas in our practice are AI governance, cybersecurity, fraud risk, third-party risk and SOX. Same senior person at scope, fieldwork and report. Your team stays in front of the audit committee. More on how we work.

02

Quality Services

External Quality Assessment, gap assessments, Topical Requirement readiness, and the Outsourced Quality Management Office (QMO). Useful for internal audit functions that want a focused engagement on a specific quality area.

Training layered into an engagement

If you want to build specialty muscle inside your own team across AI, third-party risk or fraud, we can layer training into a co-source engagement. The Fortune 500 internal audit team our practice trained is the recent reference.

A few things we do not do, on purpose. We do not replace your team, run the function for you, or hand a junior consultant to you while the senior practitioner who sold the work disappears.

If a 30-minute call would help you sort out what kind of help (if any) actually makes sense, just reply to this email and we will find time. No formal intake, no pitch deck, just a real conversation with someone who has been doing this work.

Book 30 minutes

The Cherry Hill team

Cherry Hill Advisory · 1930 East Marlton Pike, Suite Q, Cherry Hill, NJ 08003 · Unsubscribe

Focus 2026

Starts when someone downloads Focus 2026.

Six emails go out over the following month. The first hands over the download, the middle four send something worth reading, and the last one explains where Cherry Hill comes in and asks for a conversation. Every email is signed by the firm and asks for a reply rather than a click.

Day 0	Day 3	Day 8	Day 15	Day 22	Day 30
Your Focus 2026 download is ready	A read on what to put on next year's plan	60 minutes that play to a leadership audience	How the 2024 Standards changed annual planning	How one CAE built a co-source plan into the annual plan	Where we usually come in on annual planning

Your Focus 2026 download is ready

Preview text: Plus a few words on how Cherry Hill works

YOUR DOWNLOAD

Focus 2026 download

Open your download

PDF, opens in your browser

Hi Sarah,

Here is your download. The button above will open it.

A quick note since we are new to your inbox. Cherry Hill is an internal audit and risk firm. Mostly former Chief Audit Executives with the standard credentialing stack (CIA, CRMA, CISA, CISSP, CDPSE). IIA Authorized Licensee. A member of our senior team played a role in shaping the 2024 Global Internal Audit Standards.

The thing we lead with: the senior practitioner who shows up to your kickoff is the same one who runs the engagement, scope through report.

We will send a handful of pieces over the next month that pair with what you grabbed. Mostly pieces our team uses when CAEs are working through next year's internal audit plan.

If a 30-minute conversation with a senior practitioner would help in the meantime, reply to this email.

The Cherry Hill team

A read on what to put on next year's plan

Preview text: Built for the planning meeting

FROM THE RISK REGISTER

The Internal Auditor's Playbook for 2026

Hi Sarah,

A piece our team wrote that pairs with Focus 2026.

The Internal Auditor's Playbook for 2026 →

The annual look at what should be on a competent internal audit plan for 2026. It is structured so a team can read it in 15 minutes and have something to talk about at the next planning meeting. We hear back from CAEs that the playbook saves them a planning conversation.

GOES WITH IT

If you have not pulled it, The 2026 Pulse of Internal Audit is the annual benchmarking read on budget, scope and staffing across internal audit functions.

The Cherry Hill team

60 minutes that play to a leadership audience

Preview text: Risk Radar 2026, kept marketing-free

WEBINAR / 60 MINUTES

Risk Radar 2026: What Internal Audit Should Keep Top of Mind

Webinar still to be sourced

Hi Sarah,

If you have stakeholders who need to be in the next planning conversation but cannot sit through a four-hour working session, Risk Radar 2026 is the recording our team sends in that situation.

It covers the risks we are seeing across internal audit functions this year. It was recorded for a practitioner audience, and we kept the marketing slide off the end so it plays in a leadership meeting without any editing.

Watch the recording

The Cherry Hill team

How the 2024 Standards changed annual planning

Preview text: What is actually different in fieldwork

FROM THE RISK REGISTER

Hi Sarah,

A second piece that lands well with teams in the planning window.

How the Role of Internal Audit Is Evolving Under the Global Standards →

A practitioner read on what the 2024 Standards actually change in fieldwork. The annual plan picks up the changes that have flowed through to practice, so it is worth reading as you finalise next year's plan.

The Cherry Hill team

How one CAE built a co-source plan into the annual plan

Preview text: Anonymized, but the structure is real

This one is waiting on the engagement details. Everything around it is finished.

FROM AN ENGAGEMENT

How one CAE built a co-source plan into the annual plan

Hi Sarah,

TO COME FROM MIKE: the client detail, the specific question, and the outcome. See his 15 June comment offering a call to build these.

The CAE was building the 2026 internal audit plan and knew the AI governance and third-party risk coverage required specialty depth the team did not have.

We scoped the co-source plan with the CAE in two weeks. A senior practitioner from our team mapped the specialty audits to the plan, costed them, and produced the memo the CAE took into the audit committee.

If you are working through a similar plan and want a senior practitioner to walk through how it would map, reply to this email.

The Cherry Hill team

Where we usually come in on annual planning

Preview text: Co-source, not outsource

WHERE WE COME IN

Where we usually come in on annual planning

Hi Sarah,

Last one from us in this series. If you have made it through all six, thanks for reading.

Here is where we usually come in on internal audit work, in case any of it lines up with what you are thinking about for next year.

01

Co-sourced internal audit

Our most common engagement. A senior practitioner from our team runs specific audits alongside your internal audit team. Common areas in our practice are AI governance, cybersecurity, fraud risk, third-party risk and SOX. Same senior person at scope, fieldwork and report. Your team stays in front of the audit committee. More on how we work.

02

Quality Services

External Quality Assessment, gap assessments, Topical Requirement readiness, and the Outsourced Quality Management Office (QMO). Useful for internal audit functions that want a focused engagement on a specific quality area.

03

Training layered into an engagement

If you want to build specialty muscle inside your own team across AI, third-party risk or fraud, we can layer training into a co-source engagement. The Fortune 500 internal audit team our practice trained is the recent reference.

A few things we do not do, on purpose. We do not replace your team, run the function for you, or hand a junior consultant to you while the senior practitioner who sold the work disappears.

If a 30-minute call would help you sort out what kind of help (if any) actually makes sense, just reply to this email and we will find time. No formal intake, no pitch deck, just a real conversation with someone who has been doing this work.

Book 30 minutes

The Cherry Hill team

Cherry Hill Advisory · 1930 East Marlton Pike, Suite Q, Cherry Hill, NJ 08003 · Unsubscribe